'The Simple Life' Returns for the Fifth Season

Paris and Nicole, back together again

Many thought that, with all the fighting and throwing dirt at one another, the reality show that tormented us would come to an end. But Paris Hilton and Nicole Richie proved that no bitching around can come between them and, it's official, they are set and ready to start shooting for the third part of their show, 'The Simple Life'. According to the executive producer Jon Murray, the feud that has been raging between the two socialites almost led to the death of the show. But the two girls are back together again, on speaking terms that is, and are now preparing to start shooting next month. And it won't even happen as it did last season, when Paris and Nicole were never present on the same set at the same time. This time around, according to Murray, they will be sent on a deserted island, where they will openly talk about what made their friendship collapse and which were the things that only made matters worse between them. 'The thing is, the viewers love the two girls together. America, Paris and Nicole are going to camp [where they will talk about] what led to the breakdown in the friendship and maybe some of the misunderstandings and things that got in the way.', Murray told the Associated Press. According to him, both girls agreed on the idea of the island and, to make things better, they already kissed and made up in real life, too. Shooting for the fifth season will start next month and fans will get to see the poor rich girls doing housework and all kinds of chores come next spring, on E! Entertainment.
