

27 June 2007

By: Elena Balan, Communications News Editor

Huatian K998

3 SIM Cards in One Phone with Huatian K998

When a 2 SIM phone is not enough, what do you do? Get one with 3 SIM slots

One SIM is definitely not enough for some phone users. Even two SIM card slots might be insufficient for others. In such cases, an exceptional solution comes from the Huatian K998 mobile phone, which manages to pack an impressive number of 3 SIM cards. China seems to be the place where a large number of intriguing phone concepts are being released. Huatian K998 is one of them and manages to lead the multi-SIM phones trend with style and high performances. 3 SIM cards in one single device is a concept almost difficult to believe. Still, it turns out to be true, as official specifications reveal. That is great news for people living in countries with three network bands and for those who travel a great deal of time too. Changing SIM cards in order to adapt to frequencies in new countries may prove to be difficult, which makes such a phone concept excellent. Huatian K998 comes with several other appealing features, aside from the 3 SIM card slots. This mobile phone has a 3 inch touch screen display which will manage to compete with almost any other smartphone of these performances. Exact measures of this mobile phone have not been revealed, although it should come in pretty big sizes, when considering the large display screen. There is also a downside for this phone, as only one SIM can be active at a time. The two others are just kept in a safe place, waiting to be activated by the owner. That too might turn out to be useful, as losing one of the SIMs is left out of the question and the battery does not have to be removed every time the cards are interchanged. Huatian K998 is available only in China at this moment for the estimated price of USD 200.