The series is expected to feature some affordable price tags

It's not really a must to know everything related to the name aigo, but if you're an F1 fan you should definitely know that aigo has now teamed up with McLaren. In fact, it's the first Chinese company to do so and is also an official sponsor for the 2008 Beijing Olympics. Well, these fellows seem to have their work under control. But, as you know, this company is also in the business of manufacturing MP3, MP4 players, PMPs and digital cameras and plenty of cool electronic devices. Therefore, their brand new array of products, targeting the old and shiny Bollywood sets in India, shouldn't surprise anyone. The range includes almost everything you can find on other markets, such as the aigo F020 MP3 player, voice recorder and analog watch. The device comes equipped with 4 EQ presets and with a USB cable and bundled earphones for some private music playback. What's really cool is that the player battery is independent of the watch, so you don't have to worry about time slowing down. The device comes available in a single 512MB capacity and costs around Rs 4150. And hey, this is some serious stuff, as the watch has been designed by famous watch maker, Citizen. The other item on the list to hit the Indian market is the aigo F566, which was co-manufactured by Oakley, itself. The glares feature an incorporated MP3 player with a storage capacity of 1GB. But the F566 can also perform some cool voice recorder. Price? Well, the 1GB model is priced at Rs 4000. And finally, among the listed products, there is also the aigo A208 flash-based MP3 player with a built-in USB connector. It also reveals a nice blue backlit LDC display, noticeable in dark, as well as some other extra options such as the FM radio, the voice recorder and five EQ presets to maximize the sound performances. It's powered by an AAA battery and - as the company claims - it boasts up to 10 hours' battery life. Interested? 1GB of this model will be available for about Rs 3000.
