Baldwin wants his daughter back

The "Aviator" actor attempted to exercise his visitations rights over the weekend, but when he arrived at the appointed time, he found the house empty, reports the Tuesday, Sept. 27 edition of "Extra." Just before the incident, Baldwin filled the legal paper to demand more privileges, declaring : "I believe the child lives in a constant state of tension wherein she must never display or divulge her true feelings for her father because of the mother's all-consuming and bitter feelings toward me."
