Britney Betrayed

K-Fed closes ranks fast - One by one, all of Britney's close ones are getting served

The battle between K-fed and Britney is getting nastier. Not that we weren't expecting it, but it looks like nowadays, "speed" is the word, and Federline sure moves quickly. We all know the story of Alli Sims being served with her subpoena at three in the morning and if you've watched the video you know she hasn't been extremely thrilled about it. Well, cousin Alli was just step one in the plan, as it looks like what had all the signs of a fierce custody battle is turning into a family feud that will make all those around Britney choose sides and stick to them. Step two in the plan was delivering not one, but two subpoenas to Britney's bodyguard Daimon Shippen, who will apparently also be asked to testify alongside Sims as to Britney's parenting abilities. And yes, I suppose he's got as much to say, and probably even more than cousin Alli had, seeing how he's been known to mess up life for Britney in the past. Remember the sex tape stories? Well, if I were Britney I'd probably be terrified to learn what's gonna come out of this guy's mouth and I'd either be preparing a gun, some tissues or a getaway car to Mexico or some non-extradition country. And to cap it all, looks like all of Britney's family members are not exactly on her side. Who can blame them, especially her mother whom she accused of no less than sleeping with her ex-husband. And even though we haven't bought that, you have to admit it's not the best compliment a mother expects from her superstar daughter. But it's not just mom; dad and little sister Jamie Lynn are also siding with the Federline camp. Jamie Lynn reportedly called Britney on August 9th and told her she's been working hard at digging her own grave: "You wanted those babies, and look what you're doing! I'm glad Kevin's going to take them!" she said. Ouch! That's gotta hurt, Brit. And in an even more spectacularly backstabbing twist, Britney's dad has been seen visiting both K-Fed's house and, only the next day, the office of his lawyer, Mark Vincent Kaplan. That can't possibly be good news for the pop tart now can it? We gotta hand it to Britney though. No more drunken pool romps this past week, no more throwing baby bottles at reporters, no more fender benders and a bit of the quiet, I'm-on-trial lifestyle - almost. It has to be painful seeing your own family turn on you like this though, and maybe by now Brit's managed to understand just how serious this is for her and how bad the implications can be. Well, we hope that's it and she's not sitting on any other nasty surprise...at least for now.
