Britney Is a Prisoner in Her Own House

The singer spends her days changing clothes and thinking about former flame Justin Timberlake

Over the past months, as we were watching Britney Spears cruise aimlessly through L.A., we all must have said to ourselves at some point - and at least once - "I really wish someone locked that girl in her room and threw away the key". And the fact is, her father has done just that: armed with the powers granted to him by his conservatorship, Jamie Spears strolled in and put some order into Britney's life, which included exercising a strict control over her comings and goings and forcing his troubled daughter to spend most of her time in her 7,400 square foot, $7.2 million home. And now, strange details have emerged about Brit's life as a prisoner in a golden cage - including her daily habits and the eerie story of a shrine dedicated to Justin Timberlake. Most of us would probably think that being locked away in a multi-million dollar Studio City mansion would not be such a bad thing after all. But this is Britney we're talking about - nothing connected to her is ever pure or simple. OK! magazine, which broke the story, claims that the singer has a "princess' room with several walk-in closets and a spa tub" and that since she's not allowed to leave the house, she took up another hobby. "Changing clothes all day long must seem harmless enough, so her dad doesn't interfere with that", reveals a friend of the popwreck. "She'll change three or four times on days when she's not leaving the house". While there doesn't seem to be anything wrong with that, there's another part to the Britney revelations that sounds positively creepy. OK! claims the troubled singer is still obsessed with her ex boyfriend Justin Timberlake. "She has pictures of them together and has devoted a private area just to celebrate him", her friend reveals. In conclusion, Britney may not be roaming the streets eating Mexican food in the dead of night and using gas station public toilets, but she is spending her time putting on clothes and tending to her Timberlake shrine. Which one of the two versions of the singer is less harmful? I'm afraid that as things are now, that is a question for the ages...
