

25 July 2005

By:

Canon U.S.A. Launches New Faxphone L120 Laser Facsimile

With Sleek Design for Desktop and Small Office Use

Combining high-speed fax and telephoning capabilities with high-quality laser printing in one compact design, Canon U.S.A., today introduced the new Canon Faxphone L120 Laser Fax/Printer. Ideal for small and home offices, the device's low-profile and subtle appearance complement desktops while the print speed and handset allow it to multi-task as both a printer and a telephone. Reinforcing Canon's expansive retail fax product portfolio, the Faxphone L120 offers a sensible design incorporating its control panel, telephone handset, and 30-sheet document feeder into a single, compact size that fits easily onto a desktop. The new Faxphone L120 is a true multifunction device, functioning as a fax machine, monochrome laser printer, and telephone, eliminating the need for multiple devices. The new Faxphone L120 features a Super G3 33.6 Kbps modem for facsimile transmissions of up to three seconds per page and standard 16 MB of memory for storage of up to 340 letter-size page(documents. The device also delivers high-quality monochrome laser printing at up to 12 pages-per-minute (ppm), and features a 150-sheet front-loading letter cassette tray for medium to heavy workloads. Additional fax features of the Faxphone L120 include 15 one-touch speed dials, 100-coded speed dialing and broadcast dialing up to 150 separate locations. The device also has a directory search capability that allows users to look up and dial numbers using the LCD display. The Canon Faxphone L120 offers USB interface with Windows 98/Me/2000/XP OS support and Canon's bundled printer driver for laser printing. Utilizing the Cartridge 104, Canon's single cartridge system designed to produce yields of up to 2,000 printouts per cartridge, the Faxphone L120 easily handles large volume demands with low maintenance requirements. The Canon Faxphone L120 will be available through national retailers in late September at a suggested retail price of $299.