

By: ~~February 2008~~ Entertainment News Editor

Christina Aguilera Still Walks Around the House Naked

Just the coolest mom out there...

You gotta love Christina Aguilera. I mean, really. Not only did the orange-faced fresh mommy score a whooping deal with People magazine and cashed in $2 million at the expense of her newborn baby boy Max, but she also continues to be very keen on getting naked. Literally. So what's not to love? Here's a lady who has a nose for lucrative deals, is not afraid to pimp out her son and exploit her pregnancy to the maximum - and in addition to that, she also enjoys walking around the house naked on weekends, just because. Now I get it. Yes, it kind of makes sense if you think about it: if her baby boy is allowed to see his mommy and daddy naked at such a young age, I have a feeling those $2 million will mostly be used to pay for Max's therapy sessions later on in life. In that case, maybe they should have pulled a J.Lo and asked for $6 million instead. Christina calls her little naked weekend escapades "Naked Sundays", and has talked about them in the past with just as much pride. Now that her baby was born, the singer insists that the... ahem, naked family tradition is still going strong. "When it comes to things like our cozy naked Sundays I think it's important for Jordan and I not to lose ourselves. Of course, having a child requires a lot of time and attention, but we think it's really important to still have mummy and daddy time". Yes, well, I'm sure mummy and daddy need all this time to plan all those cool ways in which they intend to make money off their baby boy in the future months. Who wants to bet little Max will be modeling a line of baby clothes by the end of the spring? Christina's decision to spice up her love life and keep hubby Jordan interested in what she's got to offer dates back from last year, when she stated that "we have to be the coziest couple around. We have something called naked Sundays. On Sundays we just do everything in the house, and we're just cozy and laid back. We don't need to go anywhere, we're just with each other. We do everything naked. We cook naked. It's important to keep the marriage alive, to spice it up a little". Now why did I have to remember the part about cooking naked? I'm so going to spend the rest of my day thinking of Christina and her hubby going at it among pots and pans on the kitchen table, orange make-up all around them. No, that's not pleasant at all...