

26 January 2007

By: Elena Gorgan, Entertainment News Editor

Dita Is Even Sexier When She's Fully Clothed

Do I smell the emergence of a new fashion icon?

If you probably saw Dita von Teese down the street and asked her how she felt (which will never happen, but at least it's fun to picture it), she would probably answer your question of how she's dealing with the divorce: 'Marilyn WHO?' This is exactly the impression that she creates. While her soon to be former husband, controversial rocker Marilyn Manson is working hard in the studio, trying to put all the pain and bitterness of the separation into his lyrics or rebounding with 19-year-old actress Rachel Evan Wood, Dita von Teese is wholeheartedly enjoying herself in Paris, the capital of fashion. I know some consider her a complete sham, a woman who got her fame from stripping and marrying someone more famous than her. Also, others see her as the best fashion icon of our times and all this confuses me a bit. Personally, I think her translucent skin and her way of combining colors that accentuate that particular feature even more, in addition to her glamorous style and image, make her the perfect candidate of who's the classiest of the classiest. In the first two pics, we have Dita in Paris for fashion week, looking stunning in a one-piece snowy white suit, matched with black shoes and handbag. To add more contrast to her ensemble, she also put on her fiery red lipstick... et voila! Posh Victoria Beckham couldn't top that even if she tried with all the might of her plastic boobies! The other two pics are from Jean Paul Gaultier's show. The extravagant French designer was apparently so fascinated with her looks that he asked her to be one of the models for the show. Useless to say, Dita wowed the audience all over again, especially as Gaultier took care to dress her in two of his most outrageous designs! What more can I say? We saw Dita naked and we saw her clothed. Out of the two, I say she looks best when she's dressed. Or naked. No, dressed... Naked! There! I'm confused again!