Grand Theft Auto IV Website Up & Running

Goodies and more goodies coming from Rockstar via the Internet

Rockstar's Grand Theft Auto IV is definitely one of the games that will totally rock this year and the next year and so on, until GTA V will be released. No, hold your horses - we have no info regarding the fifth game and, to be honest, we would rather be able to fast forward the time to April than to know that GTA V will hit the market in 2011. Anyway, that's not the story. The Grand Theft Auto IV website is up and running, and you can go check it out right now, here. Get ready to face an interactive Flash map of Liberty City, get a glimpse at a bunch of new screenshots, some new movies, information about the new locales in Liberty City and many more. Basically, it's exactly what you would expect to see from Rockstar. Be warned, though - some of the Flash games managed to instantly kill our browser windows, while others lagged the hell out of them. But, in the end, everything was worth it. It's a Xbox 360 and PS3 game, after all, it doesn't really know what to do with Internet browsers, right? So, if you are not interested about paying the official GTA IV official website a visit (now... why wouldn't you be?), you should know that you are losing a chance to win one of the 50 Swinger T-shirts put up for grabs by Rockstar. Also, it seems that one ticket for the all the Swinger's season matches can be won, whatever that could mean. But if you're not lucky enough, don't worry - you will still be able to buy all sorts of GTA branded products, wear them and drive all the old ladies crazy - just because they don't know that you are aware about the fact that GTA is just a game, not something to be copied into the real life.
