Gwyneth Paltrow Denies Leaving London

Paltrow: "The British press are just ridiculous."

Actress Gwyneth Paltrow has denied the recent rumors about her leaving London and returning to the United States. Paltrow, 33, married to British Coldplay frontman Chris Martin, the father of her baby girl Apple, since December 2003, has often criticized America and its government. "It's a strange time to be an American now. I feel like we're really in trouble. I just had a baby and thought, 'I don't want to live there.' Bush's anti-environment, pro-war policies are a disgrace." Last week, it appears that the actress told the US edition of Marie Claire magazine that she wants to leave England and move back to America, because the London streets were dirty, the customer service was poor and it rained all the time. "My husband thinks I'm way too obsessed with cleanliness and germs. I'm just like, 'The street is filthy, could we take off our shoes before we come into the house?' He used to imitate me and say, 'Ewww, oh my God!' Also, the customer service is just rubbish in England. They'll tell you it'll take two weeks for your Internet service to be fixed! It drives me nuts. And I miss being able to get anything at any time of day. You can't do that there. It always does rain", Paltrow complained. But the actress denied allegations, saying that her words were misinterpreted. Gwyneth says: "The British press are just ridiculous. I've never said anything like that. "I don't know where they get off, making up these mean things. But they do."
