

23 July 2005

By:

Investing Systems Launches New Stock Signal Pro Technical Analysis Trading Software

A program specially developed for short-term swing traders

The Stock Signal Pro software is designed to issue precision entry and exit points for swing traders based strictly on technical analysis. New features include a high-speed data option that enables a "whole market scanner" as well as the "hand-picked" preferred signals identified by the developer, according to a press release from the company. "We designed the Stock Signal Pro as a tool for investors to make the process of finding high probability trades as simple as possible," said, William McKinley, President of Investing Systems. "But the best feature has to be the market scanner now available with the high speed data." "The Stock Signal Pro is a stand alone software system that features free data for historical as well as current quotes and will issue trading signals on every stock in your watch-list." "The addition of the high speed data option makes it possible for the software to scan the whole market based on user criteria," McKinley said. "The Stock Signal Pro has been one of our best selling products since its launch late in 2003. The new high speed data option makes it great software for picking stocks as well as getting the great technical signals that has always provided." Investing Systems Inc. manages a network of more than 100 websites focused on the benefits of disciplined systematic investing. Customers in more than 65 countries have used ISI products and services to become better, more disciplined, investors.