Jenna Jameson Defends Her 'Honor' on MySpace

Because that's what all celebrities should do.

These days, any celebrity can defend his/her good name and reputation through a much more accessible means of communication: the MySpace account. Why go through all that trouble of speaking with their publicist or manager or whatever, when any famous guy or dudette can simply sit in front of a computer and just ramble at will? Don't laugh: it's been done before...The latest victim of MySpace is the Queen of Porn herself, Jenna Jameson. After splitting from her porn actor/producer/director of a husband (you know, the one with the name that makes you wanna swallow your tongue and then puke it back - Jay Grdina) and hooking up with pro wrestler Tito Ortiz, Jenna began to shed weight the way others shed dirty socks. In almost no time, she became a porn version of Victoria Beckham (speaking in the language of kilograms, the comparison is actually a compliment) and the only things that were still recognizable from the once curvy blonde were - you guessed it right! - her breasts. Amidst the controversy and the accusations that had her anorexic or bulimic or something of the kind, Jenna took it upon herself to clear the air: yes, she still swallows and yes, it's food. In other words, the woman who made of porn the successful industry that it is today wrote on her personal blog that she was very hurt when she read those nasty comments in the newspapers and on the Internet. She claimed that no one should judge her because she had 'busted her ass off' to get to where she is now (probably, she also busted a couple of vaginas along the way, but that's an entirely different story). 'I wish I could enlighten everyone with what is exactly going on in my divorce and business, but I can't because of legal proceedings. I really hope everyone understands and remembers I am human, and I really need friends and the love and support right now. Soon the divorce will be settled and I am hoping to come out unscathed, but my x is doing his best to make it hard', she wrote, partially blaming Jay for the things going on in her life right now. But he is not to be slandered like this and not say a word: in the true he said/she said fashion, Mr. Grdina also posted a message on his blog. His, on the other hand, was ten times more harsh and straightforward than Jenna's: he called her everything from poor excuse of a human being to a person who can't assume responsibility for her actions, constantly going and blaming other people for her own issues. Oh, and he also hinted something about Jenna doing drugs: 'the person in need has no control; abuses and consumes .. consumes like a psychic vampire!', was how he subtly put it. Jenna, in return, was so upset with Jay's innuendos that she immediately went to her computer and posted this: 'Publicity hungry.. Just like always... he rears his ugly head, only when it might mean a little press for him. He wants to be a star so bad, and has ridden my coat tails for years. I wish him luck, he wants it more than anyone I know. He gave everything up for it... period. It's really too bad that he feels the need to bash me and not accept any blame for his hideous actions... but it will all come out in the end. The truth will set you free. Good luck... J'. Remember, all this happened in less than 24 hours. And I thought I was the only one living in front of the computer. As a side note, the public is now waiting for Jay's response... this is about to get a lot more interesting than before. Speaking of Jay, I also wanted to include a photo of him but decided against it, since looking at the hotness that is Jenna is way much more fun!
