

16 November 2005

By: Simona Gherman, Entertainment Editor

Jennifer Aniston Topless on the Cover of GQ's Magazine

She has learned her lesson

It is the first time a woman has topped the men's list: Jennifer Aniston has become the first ever Woman Of The Year for the men's magazine GQ's. She will be posing topless on one of the three covers of the magazine. Editor Mark Healy has joked about that, saying that "sometimes, when you think someone is deserving, then you make room." Her boyfriend Vince Vaughn and rapper 50 Cent were also on the list. Aniston has declared for the publication that she had learned a lot from the past. If she were to live her romance with Brad Pitt again, she would keep herself from making public statements about her love life. She totally approves Gwyneth Paltrow, who has criticized her in the past for being so open about private matters. "You know she's right, she's absolutely correct. I feel like there is a graveyard of celebrity couples who now have learned their lesson." Brad Pitt has also learned his lesson, as he and Angelina are being very strict in their relationship with the press.