

89: July 2005

John Lennon's Memorabilia To Be Auctioned

A collection of John Lennon memorabilia is going to be auctioned at the Hippodrome in central London on Thursday evening.

A collection of John Lennon memorabilia is going to be auctioned at the Hippodrome in central London on Thursday evening. The collection of memorabilia, estimated at $2,2 million, include the tunic that inspired the Sgt Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band album cover and a handwritten manuscript of All You Need Is Love. The tunic, wore by John Lennon during a photo shoot for Life magazine in 1966, was estimated to be sold at $60,000. And the manuscript that is supposed to be from the stage after the Beatles appeared on a live TV performance in 1967, is estimated at $1,1 million. Auctioneer Ted Owen said: "If this lyric reaches 500,000 pounds ($1,1 million), and it could well go for a lot more, it would have doubled the world record price for a pop manuscript." "The items in this sale combine all the best elements of the man himself,"Owen added. "It is iconic, idealistic and irreverent."