Jon Voight Wants Angelina Jolie to Let Him Be An Active Grandfather for Her and Brad Pitt's Child

Despite the numerous failed attempts of reconciliation engaged by Jon Voight, the actor tries one more time to conciliate with Angie

Movie beauty Angelina Jolie is still refusing to heal the bitter rift with her dad, Oscar-winning actor Jon Voight. Despite the 65-year-old Midnight Cowboy star's desperate television plea to reconcile with his daughter, the 29-year-old beauty is still refusing to speak with him. The movie veteran is now insisting on his heartache over being excluded from his daughter's life, especially now when she is pregnant with Brad Pitt's child. Angelina Jolie's estranged father is desperate to contact his daughter, as he wishes to be an active grandfather in the upcoming years. The Deliverance star had been urging his superstar daughter to procreate with her lover Brad Pitt, insisting that he had the genes she'd been searching for. Now that this has already happened, he wants to be included in her family life. But the strong-willed brunette keeps up the animosity between them and seems not to be forgiving. Jon Voight sadly says that: "I'm always trying to reach her and send her my love but I still haven't spoken to her. I wish somebody would help me and give her a call. Now she has announced she is pregnant with Brad's child, I would love to be included in this exciting moment." The actor has previously tried to get closer to his daughter's soul by involving himself in her life. He was even very concerned about the fact that Angie adopted her two children, Maddox and Zahara, instead of having children of her own. "I'm not sure why she hasn't had her own children. Maybe she hasn't found the right father. I like the look of Brad though. I've got a good feeling about him", Jon Voight said.
