The famous model has topped a poll conducted by Grazia magazine

Kate Moss was named the "Best-Dressed Woman Of 2005". The model, who has gone through a lot this year, after she has been pictured snorting cocaine and lost important lucrative contracts after the images of her using drugs were published, has topped a poll conducted by Grazia magazine. "Whatever trouble she's had in her private life, Kate Moss remains the style icon of our times, with an incredible 34 per cent of the vote", according to Grazia editor Jane Bruton. Moss beat out Hollywood celebrities such as second placed Scarlett Johansson and Casanova beauty Sienna Miller, who came in third, to take top spot. Singer Gwen Stefani and Australian actress Nicole Kidman rounded up the top five, while Brad Pitt's girlfriend Angelina Jolie came sixth. Kirsten Dunst came in at number 7, followed by the ex Mrs Pitt - Jennifer Aniston, Kiera Knightley and Victoria Beckham. The 31-year-old catwalk queen proved she has remained a fashion icon for fans. After she checked out of rehab, Moss signed her first contract since the cocaine scandal; the deal with mobile phone giant Virgin is worth £1.2million. "She's sorted herself out and she has a new approach to life", a source revealed.
