

5 July 2006

By: Elena Gorgan, Entertainment News Editor

Keira Knightley: 'Anorexia Runs in My Family'

Skinny actress slams eating disorder rumors.

'The Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Man's Chest' promotion tour moved to Europe and, on its premiere in London, the 21-year-old beauty wowed everyone by choosing to wear an extremely revealing Gucci dress that exposed most of the upper part of her body. She spent most of the time keeping a close eye on the dress, so as to avoid any wardrobe malfunction or boobie-revealing incident. While critics immediately jumped on the occasion and declared her a 'sweaty disco crack ho', most of her fans were enchanted by her almost too-slim-figure and grace. Yet, they couldn't help themselves from wondering if the rising star isn't suffering from the Hollywood-esque typical disease, anorexia. During the press conference held after the premiere, Keira answered all the questions patiently, including those related to her so-called eating disorder. She told the reporters that, despite the fact that anorexia is almost a family trait and that her grandmother and great-grandmother suffered from it, she personally has no such problems. The actress added that she feels good to be so skinny and that, were she an anorexic, she would have been the first to know, as she is very familiar to the disorder's effects and consequences. Further on, Keira told the British public that she has no regrets for wearing the revealing dress, even if it caused such bad reactions from everybody. 'I'm still thinking it was rather inappropriate to wear this dress, but it's so hot I'm really glad I did', said the 'Pirates' star, thus silencing all commentaries.