Kimberly Stewart May Have Liver Cancer... or Not

The daughter of the legendary rocker denies having a liver illness

Kimberly Stewart, the 27-year-old daughter of the legendary rocker Rod, got a pair of new boobs to boost her self-confidence. With that in mind, the socialite began to party as hard as she could, various media outlets inform, and apparently it caught up with her. In an interview with 'Rolling Stone' Magazine, Rod said: 'She just discovered that she had a very serious liver illness from drinking too much. She said to me, "Dad, I'm half Scottish -- I thought I was allowed to drink a lot." I said, "No darling, it doesn't work like that.", hinting that his daughter may have been diagnosed with liver cancer. But Kim denied what her father said by making a statement to 'People' Magazine and rubbishing rumors about her having liver cancer. It's just that Rod has a very big mouth and doesn't always know how to express himself properly, she said. 'I love my dad but sometimes he has a big mouth and not just when he's singing. I don't have a liver disease. I was exhausted and feeling sick from burning the candle at both ends, and my doctor told me to cut back on drinking and smoking, which I have, and I feel so much better.', Kim explained. However, Rod Stewart too became aware that his words had a different outcome than what he hoped and later on stated that his comment in 'Rolling Stone' was taken out of context and misinterpreted. 'Kimberly had an inflamed liver and she's perfectly fine now', the singer said after the sudden change of heart.
