

23 November 2006

By: Elena Gorgan, Entertainment News Editor

Lindsay Lohan Overdosed on Cocaine and Painkillers

The actress overdosed and an unnamed doctor came to her rescue at the Chateau Marmont

Allegations about Lindsay doing drugs are not new, but this is definitely the first time that she is named directly by a media outlet in an overdose scandal. 'The National Enquirer' just published a story on the red-headed actress, based on the words of an 'inside source' and claiming that she had overdosed on November 12th. Apparently, Lindsay was partying in her room at the Chateau Marmont (from which she was later evicted after a dispute with the management) and got a little too carried away riding the magic dragon. One of her many friends found her unconscious on the floor and immediately called for a doctor. Upon arriving, the unnamed physician found the room 'drug-filled' and Lohan lying unresponsive amidst 'a stash of cocaine and a pile of prescription drugs'. Either because he was aware of the identity of his patient or because he realized that he shouldn't be there, the doctor ran to the bathroom, threw the cocaine down the toilet and collected 'seven different prescription drugs'. Before the tabloid published this story, Lindsay was accused by Britain's 'The Sun' for being a cutter, after she was spotted in London with several cuts on her forearm. Her publicist, contacted for comments, said that his client 'took a tumble into a bush' and played down the rumor. At about the same time, other sources said that, while presenting the World Music Awards, the actress stumbled off stage, mumbled her lines and left the ceremony before it was over, although she was the official host.