Mariah Carey Blames Terrorists For Her Album's Fiasco

Diva Mariah Carey confessed recently that she blames the terrorist attacks from 9/11 for her album's fiasco.

Diva Mariah Carey confessed recently that she blames the terrorist attacks from 9/11 for her album's fiasco. Mariah said she released her album around 9/11 and, because of the tragedy, 'Glitter' was shadowy. She said: "I released it around 9/11. I became a punching bag. I was so successful that they tore me down because my album was at No. 2 instead of No. 1. The media was laughing at me and attacked me". Mariah also claims that her album was way ahead for those times and too advance for the fans. She added: "'Glitter' was ahead of its time. Today it's in to make '80s music." Meanwhile, this week Mariah Carey's costume gave away during a concert, exposing the diva's breasts to the public. Mariah panicked, yelling at the organizer to do something, before someone could catch a glimpse of her. After a few seconds, someone turned off the lights, leaving the stage in darkness. Mariah told the spectators, joking: "Someone bring me a jacket or the show's off, we all know how quickly these images can spread around the world."
