

5 August 2005

By: Mihaela Stroia, Entertainment Editor

Michael Jackson Guilty As Sin, Free as a Bird

Two jurors from Michael Jackson's trial announced yesterday they still believe pop star Michael Jackson is "guilty as sin" and plan to write a book about their deliberations.

Two jurors from Michael Jackson's trial announced yesterday they still believe pop star Michael Jackson is "guilty as sin" and plan to write a book about their deliberations. New York Daily News claims the jurors will unveil the fact that at least three members of the panel first thought Jackson was guilty, before changing their beliefs and voting not guilty on all charges last June. Eleanor Cook, 79, will call her book "Guilty As Sin, Free As A Bird", according to some reports. Ray Hultman, 62, who said that he believed Jackson had probably molested boys, will call his book "The Deliberator". At a press conference after the verdict was read out, Mr Hultman said: "I feel that Michael Jackson probably has molested boys. "But that doesn't make him guilty of the charges that were presented in this case - and that's where we had to make our decision." Larry Garrison, the president of Silver Creek Entertainment, who will co-write for "Guilty As Sin, Free As A Bird, declared he's having the idea of making a movie about the jurors deliberation too. "These books are going to rock the nation," he told the New York Daily News. "Elly and Ray are two of the three jurors who [initially] voted for guilty."