Michelle Rodriguez Thinks We'Re All Sex Perverts

In an interview with Latina magazine, the actress reveals her disgust with the public interest in all things sexual

Michelle Rodriguez is not afraid of living up to her "bad bi girl" reputation - although, as some of you may already know, the troubled "Lost" actress has never publicly commented on her sexual orientation except to express her anger at the way the media has allegedly twisted her image and always presented her in a bad light. However, it would seem that former jail bird Michelle's feelings of disgust don't apply exclusively to the media, but to the vast majority of the world in general who, she says, mainly qualifies women according to their sexual orientation and sex appeal. "What the majority of [people] want to know is what I'm doing with my vagina, and I think that that's sick," she stated on a telephone interview with Latina magazine, speaking from New Zealand, where she is currently shooting James Cameron's new flick "Avatar". "What do you care who I'm dating? I can tell when somebody just wants to know about sex. And it makes me sick". Well, of course, we all live in a sick world who likes to pray on cute, unsuspecting actresses who make a living out of selling their skills and their looks. The public interest in her own sexual orientation is perverse and unjustified, she seems to say, and it definitely has nothing to do with the ultra-sexualized image actresses all over the world (her included) have been projecting in order to establish their identities in the eyes of the public. Of course not. "Every time you see a woman who walks down the street, you think, 'is she f*ckable?' Any woman who is in some way f*ckable, you know, if she's beautiful, or if she has a nice body, you wonder what kind of things that person does with their private area," she complains, when asked to give her opinion on why people manifest a continuing interest in her love life. "It's a very perverse way of thinking, but it's the way that the majority of adults in the United States and around the world think. Or the porn industry wouldn't be the highest grossing industry in the world". We always suspected it, but luckily, Michelle was there to dot the Is and reveal the horrible truth: the whole celebrity media is morally bankrupt and all the actors hate us. "I just keep it to myself and it's nobody's business. If I wanna f*ck a girl, a boy, a dog - that's my business. That's why there's bathroom doors," Michelle adds. Enough said.
