

3 September 2007

By: Elena Balan, Communications News Editor

Mobile IQ Trainer
Ojom

Mobile IQ Trainer, the Game to Flex Your Brain

Intelligence training

Ojom has just added Mobile IQ Trainer to its line of mobile phone games for challenging players in a brain-stimulating way. This application packs a large number of the most appreciated such concepts, also bringing a great amount of variety. The Mobile IQ Trainer is one of the most accessible ways of putting the personal wits and memory to the test any time, with the possibility of even improving these skills in time. Such mind soliciting games make the most addictive ones, which also gives Mobile IQ Trainer high chances of gaining some fans in time. The game instructions are explained through the games by a friendly talking robot, Bob, which makes it extremely easy to use. The first time when the player starts a game, it has a certain IQ. Instead of using the classic scaling, the game relies on this feature for measuring the player's evolution. There is a wide variety of challenges, including arithmetic, algebra, spatial thinking, memory and logic puzzles. There's something to suit anyone willing to live up to the brain teasing concept and pump up his IQ score up to the level of becoming a genius. There is also the possibility of introducing the personal score in a world classification, for competing against many other players. "This is a fun packed and addictive game which gives the player a fun and intellectually rewarding gaming challenge. With a combination of skill and logic the player can hone their IQ potential and have great competitive fun at the same time", said Marc Bue, channel manager, of Ojom GmbH. The game has a futuristic silver background and easy to use menu, which only add to its charm. Bob is also present throughout all games to make amusing comments and encourage the player on his way to IQ evolution. Mobile IQ Trainer is now available for download on operator portals across Europe.