

28 March 2005

By:

New PC games

This week

The most important and the most awaited title of this week is probably Splinter Cell: Chaos Theory in which Sam Fisher fights evil enemies throughout an entire single-player campaign. The most important novelty of the game is the introduction in the multiplayer mode the cooperative style where two players will collaborate to solve the mysteries of the game. Splinter Cell: Chaos Theory will be reviewed in the next edition of SoftPedia Games. Despite the problems, Eidos is releasing Lego Star Wars, developed by Traveller's Tales. The game's main argument is the presence of the 40 Star Wars characters, drawn in Lego style. Besides single player, the game also has cooperative multiplayer. Cold Fear, another game from Ubisoft, this time as a distributor, will be released this week. The gamer plays the role of a member of a paramilitary group who finds himself on a ship in the middle of a storm. As he explores the ship, the brave soldier discovers that the bad weather is the last thing he has to worry about. Also this week, the PC versions of Bloodrayne 2, Terminal Reality's shooter and Majestico, which was released for consoles last fall, will be released. Among other titles which will be released for PC, a RTS from Walkon Games is worth mentioning. The game is called Cold War Conflicts and is distributed by GMX Media. As always, the release dates can be subjected to last minute changes; it remains to be seen if the games are released at the exact dates.