

23 December 2008

By: Sorin Surdeanu, Mobile Editor

Nokia introduces the 'Comes With Music' service on the N96
Nokia

Nokia Fits the N96 with Its 'Comes With Music' Service

Available for pre-orders in the U.K.

Such a service has been expected to be included on other Nokia models besides the music-oriented ones for some time now and the first that are going to be able to enjoy this application are U.K. users. Unofficially, the news came in the form of a rumor several times before, but the fact is up till now no such claims were confirmed.

The Comes With Music service is said to be included on other mobiles resembling the N96, but mostly on those capable of not only supporting this technology, but also of delivering great audio experiences. In order to accomplish such tasks, only mobiles equipped with 16GB of memory, an advanced music player, and the popular 3.5mm jack could be considered by Nokia as up for the "challenge."

Here's one of the company's ads for the N96's new feature: "Immerse yourself in entertainment with the N96 Comes With Music Edition. Enjoy your favorite music with super sound, control playback and media keys. "

For now however the best choice and most expected too is the N96, mostly because it packs all the aforementioned features, but also since its easily-manageable, dedicated keys and great music player capabilities offer the best recommendations.

Moreover, Nokia is explaining its choice as follows, "A massive 16GB of storage allows you to make the most of over 2 million tracks, free to download from the Nokia Music store for a year, yours to keep forever. The large bright display and impressive memory brings TV, high-quality videos, and pictures to the palm of your hand, while the built-in GPS and Nokia Maps makes the N96 the best companion to help you explore and discover your surroundings."

Available for pre-orders in the U.K., the service comes with the already famous 1-year free Nokia Music Store catalogue downloads, which promises to turn the N96 into an even more appreciated handset.