

20 July 2007

By: Elena Gorgan, Entertainment News Editor

Paris and Joe Francis
- girls just wanna have fun!

Paris Hilton's Sex Tape Gets Revamped!

Ready for more? Bring on the night vision goggles!

Do you think you've really seen Paris Hilton in all her glory back in 2003, when the infamous 'One Night in Paris' was released? Well, if you do, you're in for quite a surprise! The good people at Red Light District, who also handled the distribution of the first tape, are preparing for re-distribution. And it's not going to be a reissue of the old one: die-hard fans of the only celebuteante who never did drugs or drank alcohol in her entire life will get to see an extra hour of never-before footage. Be still, my heart! Because of the success and popularity 'One Night in Paris' enjoyed and to celebrate Paris Hilton's recent release from jail, the bosses at Red Light decided to re-release her most prized work of art so far (yes, we're still talking about the sex tape) and to include on it, as a bonus, footage they cut out the first time around. And the surprises just keep coming: the tape will now come in a brand new 'collectible prison packaging', whatever that means! Paris must be thrilled at the thought that, again, every time people will look at or speak to her, they will be having the image of her cracking jokes while giving a bj to some dude forever (and ever and ever and ever) burned on their brain. So far, no official statement was released either by her directly or by her spokesperson but you'd better get used to the thought that, before you get to see the second tape, you will be witnesses to a very lengthy trial, just like the first time around. Then again, she didn't seem too bothered the first time word got out that a sex tape of hers was floating on the Internet. Sure, just like other stars who also appeared as lead characters in one of these home made flicks, she denied its existence, she sued, then declared she had reached an agreement with her former boyfriend and Red Light distribution and then infirmed all of the above. But, if you think of it, it was that very sex tape which put her on the map of celebrities. Can you imagine what a second one will do for her 'career'... we'll not be able to do anything without having Paris stare back at us! Make sure you keep your eyes on this space for more details. You know you want to.