

22 November 2006

By: Robert Matei, Gaming News Editor

Paris Hilton Designs Crystal Covered Pink Nintendo DS

Swarovski crystals in different shades of pink

Frankly, I'm disgusted with this Nintendo portable device, but I guess some of you will enjoy it. Especially you girls will probably get a kick out of this "diamond" covered thingy. More than that, I hate all pink consoles, especially if they are designed by the likes of Paris Hilton. Yeah, you're reading it right, Paris Hilton found the time to design a Nintendo DS. She managed to tear herself from all that partying and did something "useful". Apparently, this pink Nintendo DS comes in a limited edition (please no! we want more!) and costs around GBP 360. If all you American blokes were thinking of getting one for your better half, forget about it, as it is only available in the U.K. If you want to know more, I am obliged to tell you that this device will be covered with over 1,200 Swarovski's crystals in various shades of pink. Since its 2004-2005 release, the Nintedo DS has managed to sell over 26 million units and I bet that it would sell a few more units with this pink addition, because of the many mindless losers who will buy it. This news comes via Lesley Smith's blog, who happens to hate pink consoles too. What a coincidence! Maybe we should form an anti-pink consoles alliance!