

By: September 2005 News Staff, -

Paris Hilton Encourages Fans to Write Her Book

The hotel heiress wants to release a second journal

Paris Hilton has recently announced she plans to release a second book. The hotel heiress declared she needs all the help her fans could give, and encourages them to write to her. Hilton has been preparing a sequel to her book CONFESIONS OF AN HEIRESS, which will include a partially empty journal, according to Contactmusic. The book, titled YOUR HEIRESS DIARY: CONFESS IT ALL TO ME, is due in November. Hilton's journal will feature more than 150 photographs of herself, along with messages from her guiding the reader on subjects to write about, reports MTV News. Paris did not reveal whether she had received any messages from fans regarding her being investigated by the police after drug and alcohol allegations. The claims are linked to one episode of Hilton's reality show The Simple Life: Interns, when the socialite reportedly offered teens marijuana and bourbon to "loosen them up" for a taped segment. "She loaded myself and two other underage kids on shots of Jack Daniels to loosen us up for the show", said one of the teens who witnessed the pot scene. Meanwhile, a spokesman for 20th Century Fox - the company behind The Simple Life - insists the allegations are false: "Paris would never endanger the welfare of a minor." The Baltimore Police officials are taking the reports very seriously; they ordered a thorough investigation on the issue. "These are serious allegations. We will certainly be investigating them", Baltimore Police Detective Chris Schaeffer told US tabloid the National Enquirer. Paris was previously fined for bad driving. The socialite was heading along Beverly Hills' famous Rodeo Drive in her $155,000 Bentley when she was stopped by Police officers. According to some onlookers, the hotel heiress tried to avoid a ticket by claiming she had been trying to escape the paparazzi. The 'Simple Life' star was issued with a ticket for making an improper turn and for an equipment violation, and could face a $300 fine. Photographer Frank Rohmer told America's New York Post newspaper: "She was pointing at us, saying that it was our fault. She always drives crazy." Meanwhile, Paris still slams her former best friend and co-star Nicole Richie. Apparently, the sparring socialites kept their distance from each other all night at an Emmy Awards after-show party organized at Hollywood's Roosevelt Hotel.