Paris Hilton is giving advice to her mother, Kathy Hilton, who is going to be the host of a new NBC series, "I Want to Be a Hilton." "Be very careful not to look in the camera. Always be camera-ready. And don't trust the producers." According to AP Radio, Paris Hilton declared that "I just told her to always know the camera's there," Paris Hilton told reporters recently, according to AP Radio. "And not say anything bad because there's a microphone on you. And just to be yourself." The show, set to debut Tuesday night, presents 14 young contestants who have to walk through all kind off challenges, from art and culture to beauty and fashion. The winner will receive a $200,000 trust fund. Kathy Hilton confessed that she is very excited about the show. "I didn't even think about it. Why not? When I just heard all these fun things that I can do and take these people. That's all I really thought about and then I thought, `Ooh, I've gotten myself into this, haven't I?'" she said.
