

24 May 2007

By: Elena Balan, Communications News Editor

Sexy Pillowfight between Models

A game that needs neither tactics, nor a wide range of options

Two girls fighting is always a sexy image. Nail scratches, tousled hair and feathers flying everywhere is the view that I-Play offers in the Sexy Pillowfight game that they have just published.

I-Play has actually set up a party in order to properly launch this mobile game and strengthen its impact. They dressed some girls in pink shorts and white tops, handed them plenty of pillow munition and left them to have fun while pillowfighting. Still, the models were not the only ones to enjoy the fight, as all men and few women that were watching them had fun too.

It is clear that the mobile game's audience is mostly male, as if there was ever any question about it. Sexy Pillowfight features several battles between attractive girls wearing sexy outfits. Quite an original idea coming from Canabara developer, as to use pillows in the mobile game battles, although a bit outdated at the girl fight chapter.

Good looking models will always arouse people's interest and make good team with the entertainment concept that mobile games try to provide. For this reason, Sexy Pillowfight has high chances of turning up a big success.

For exceptional results in the pillowfight, the user will win an award, aside the gained points. Moreover, the game has few control options, as the player can only dodge the other girl's attacks and then hit her when caught off-guard. Moreover, the default opponent is always stronger and capable of better tackling the player's hits. Even more options are included once the game is unlocked, offering the user higher chances of winning.

The actual fight is less important, as there is little probability that anyone will buy this for the game tactics and evolved combat challenge rather than just for having scantily dressed models ravage their hair with pillows.