

20 October 2008

By: Florin Tibu, Audio Editor

Sony Bubble, a new fashion gadget for ladies only
Sony

Sony Bubble, Treats for a Lady's Ears

Blingy headphones for ladies only

Following Audio Technica's latest trend as far as mixing together women's fashion and audio technology was concerned, Sony has revealed its newest line of blingy headphones, created for ladies' listening pleasure. Codenamed Bubble, these in-ear headphones could easily become your accessory of choice as they can actually add to your overall style and looks; and if you wanted more from your casual headphones, the Bubbles might very well be what you were looking for.

There is no technology breakthrough in the Sony Bubble headphones so if you're looking for some high-tech in-ear gear, you're barking at the wrong tree. These nifty headphones are all about fashion and decent sound and that's about all there is to them.

The catalog name for the Sony Bubble is MDR-EX33 so in case you plan to go shopping for them at an audio equipment dealer be sure you ask for this name, as "show me some Bubbles, please" might not lead you to the answer you were looking for.

These in-ear headphones come in six different colors: white, green, purple, gold, blue and silver so you can match them with pretty much any of your clothes in case you pay that much attention to such details.

The Sony Bubble headphones come with small round backends with a shiny and sparkling pearloid appearance; despite their rather neat look, it looks like they don't go too well with sports, but it also seems that people looking to fashionably match their headphones with their clothes aren't quite the sporty kind.

These headphones boast a 6 Hz - 23 kHz frequency range and have a 100 dB sensitivity, with either 0.6m or 1.2m cable lengths, included cable management system and three silicone sleeves for a snug fit in any ear. Announced prices are around $22; so far the Sony Bubble headphones sell in Japan only but it's expected that they will be available in other countries as well.

We are just a few, but there are many of you, Softpedia users, out there. That's why we thought it would be a good idea to create an email address for you to help us a little in finding gadgets we missed. Interesting links are bound to be posted with recognition going mainly to those who submit. The address is .