The Hilton Sisters: Still Naked, Still Rich

No surprises here...

It was funny to see people's reactions to the news that the Hilton sisters (along with their parents, uncles, aunts and horde of cousins) have just about kissed their fabulous $30 million apiece inheritance goodbye. Some were sorry for Paris and Nicky, others rejoiced and thought this would teach the greedy Hiltons a lesson in humility, and others - just like me - remained skeptical about the whole situation. Why? Well, for the simple reason that, as much as I'd want to see Paris wear the same outfit twice and stop acting like the world exists only to serve her, that will most probably never happen. The reason for this is that, try as we may not to admit it, an impressive number of people still pay impressive amounts of money in order to associate themselves with Paris. And with a little imagination and a good accountant, whether we like it or not, Paris is set to continue to be her annoying (rich) self for a long, long time. Ever since the news came that Paris' grandfather decided to donate most of his impressive fortune to charity, we've been seeing a lot of photos of Paris and her younger sister Nicky in various states of undress - probably meant to reassure us all that the days of outrage, infamous bikini shots and silly advertisements paid with silly amounts of cash are not over by far. In fact, Paris, Nicky and their family are on holiday right now, probably trying to forget all about the troubles back home - or simply not giving a damn about what's going on there, either choice is just as plausible. But this doesn't mean the eye of the media is not on them - which leads me to these Nicky Hilton bikini pictures. I always thought Nicky was the "good" Hilton, and she pretty much was - no DUI, no drugs that we know of and a relatively normal relationship with a guy she seems to like. But there's something strange about seeing her in a bathing suit, looking too thin for her own good - something almost unnatural. It's probably just the shock of not seeing Paris frolicking around showing off - not yet anyway. But never fear - we haven't forgotten about poor little Paris (kidding) so here she is too, advertising that canned champagne of hers and looking very pleased with herself - and the money she's getting for it, I bet. So, people, no need to worry - we won't be seeing the Hilton sisters begging for change anytime soon. Just how good or bad that is, that's for you to decide.
