The Urbz: Sims in the City is a video game for the GameCube, PlayStation 2 and Xbox consoles, as well as the Game Boy Advance and Nintendo DS portable systems. It is the third Sims game for video game consoles. The next release for consoles and handhelds was the console port of The Sims 2. The goals of the GameCube, Playstation 2 and Xbox games of The Urbz: Sims in the City involve becoming popular with the Urbz (Sims in the game) living in nine different neighborhoods of SimCity. To achieve this, a player must buy and wear the right clothing and learn social interactions by completing quests. Hip hop group The Black Eyed Peas provided several music scores for the game, which have also been translated into Simlish. Members of the group would also appear as guest Urbz in the game. The objective of the GameCube, Playstation 2 and Xbox games are to go to each of nine neighborhoods and gain "Rep", reputation in short. Rep is a measure of how popular a character is; as a character gains more reputation, they gain access to larger apartments and different neighborhoods. In the end, the character will have the largest apartment and be able to visit any of the neighborhoods.

Glitches Free Cash First you need to earn $1,000 Simoleons. Now start a two player game and create a new character to play with yours. Give this new created character $1,000 Simoleons. Have your main character walk somewhere real far doing something else. Now tell your newly created character to give your main character $1,000 Simoleons. Do this as fast as possibly so that you have this command building up. Even though your newly created character will say that he has nothing to give, your main character will continue to take the money getting it from nowhere. Do this as much as you like until you have all the Simoleons you want. Here's the trailer of the game, in its PS2 version:
