

3 February 2006

By: Silviu Stahie, Video and PC Games Editor

Time to Declare Your Allegiance as the RF Online Beta Test Begins!

The most epic battles ever seen in a MMO role-playing game

The beta test for RF Online, the hotly anticipated sci-fi and fantasy MMORPG has gone live, Codemasters Online Gaming announced today. Over the next four weeks the RF Online beta will play host to 50,000 testers putting the game through its paces on its brand new network infrastructure, based in Boston MA. David Solari, Director of Codemasters Online Gaming, commented: "To get to this stage is a huge landmark for RF Online, the beta test will lead the way to the game's retail release in late February and give our fantastic community the opportunity to experience the game before it hits the shelves." Gamers who will join the RF Online beta test are now being contacted following the beta sign-up program, which began last November. With a limited number of places remaining in the beta test, gamers can still apply to participate by registering via the beta sign-up form on the game's official site www.rf-onlinegame.com. The beta enables players to create a character from one of RF Online's three all-powerful warring factions - the Bellato Union with their Mech battle units, the mystical Holy Alliance Cora or the mighty robots of the Accretian Empire - and engage in the game's full-scale battles that can feature thousands of players.