Tori Spelling Is Full of Surprises

Four months pregnant, the star is already buying baby items

'Life and Style' and 'The Ottawa Sun' report that the daughter of late TV producer Aaron Spelling may have something more up her sleeve than just an upcoming career on Broadway. Shockingly enough, sources close to Tori claim that she is actually four months pregnant. The 33-year-old actress and TV host (namely, on her own show 'So NoTorious'), is said to have made the news public to all her girlfriends during a shopping spree at the West Hollywood maternity store 'Petit Tresor'. And, of course, one of them went straight to the tabloids with the story...Rumor has it that Spelling bought many baby items, including a changing table and a little crib and a lot of clothes. 'Tori told me that when she finds out the sex of the baby, she'll order appropriately, but right now she's picking out [clothes] for both genders', the friend told the reporters. Of course, having a baby on the way and a Broadway debut can't make up for the tragic loss of her father and the continuing feud with her mother. Anyway, it should serve as compensation, at least for a while...Contacted by reporters, Spelling's publicist responded to the rumor, claiming that it is completely unfounded. 'No, she is not pregnant. She was in that store [Petit Tresor] over six weeks ago buying a gift for a friend who recently had a baby'. How convenient, isn't it?
