

26 July 2005

By:

Vardan Kushnir's Death Had Nothing to Do with Spam

It was an ordinary robbery

Mosnews comes with new insights in the case of the most famous Russian spammer. According to the information given by the police, Kushnir's death is the result of a common robbery and not the result of those driven mad by his spamming actions. The police have found out that Vardan Kushnir, was seen leaving a Moscow night club accompanied by three girls. In the spammer's apartment investigators found traces of sleep inducing drugs in the wine. The police are assuming that this wasn't enough to put Kushnir to sleep, and that he probably tried to fight his attackers when they tried to rob him. According to Mosnews, the police have said that the robbers took from the apartment money, credit cards and electronics. The police have detained one of girls involved in Kushnir's death. Mosnews also informs that the Russian media has not wept over Kushnir's death, the majority of sources that talked about his death discussing more about the role played by Vardan Kushnir in the spreading of unwanted messages.