

30 August 2007

By: Monica Gaza, Entertainment News Editor

Do you smell pot?

What's with That Cigarette Honey?

Drunk and possibly a little stoned too, that's the way to go for Lily Allen

Lily Allen is definitely living her life. The life of a self-destructive, binge drinking celebrity, but hey, it's all part of the big game, isn't it? The 22-year old, who's known for her foul mouth (remember a couple of weeks ago when she told President Bush to fk off?) and her even fouler temper (she's not allowed into the United States anymore because she assaulted some photographers a while back) gave full vent to her euphoria at the famous London Notting Hill carnival. Reports say that the singer best known for such hits as "Smile" and "LDN" was drinking heavily throughout the day and at one point even passed out in front of a pub called The Cow. In order to stop everybody from taking pictures of her, the staff from nearby restaurant Rosa's Dining Room took Allen inside and tried to sober her up before putting her in a taxi and sending her home. Yes, that's what I'm talking about - public humiliation is such a great thing, especially if you're a know troublemaker. But why all the euphoria? The answer could lie in plain view - and it's not that unexpected or that difficult to figure out. Just hours before her drunken romp, Allen was photographed hiding behind some friends and enjoying a large rolled-up cigarette. Now we're talking. Could sweet Lily have been enjoying a little marijuana? Well, come on, she's not that young, she can have her fun from time to time right? And the pot (or whatever it was) would most certainly account for the happiness, and the recklessness pushed to downright stupidity which she displayed throughout the day. And it wasn't just the drinking and the passing out. Whether she liked it or not (well, she most certainly didn't but we did) she also managed to have reggae singer Bobby Ray pour a can of Guinness on her head. I'm not sure that was a very good way of sobering her up, but it sure made for a nice visual. Lily, it seems, wanted to have the stage for herself and perform (which would have happened anyway, but she's just impatient like that) and apparently she actually pushed Ray off the 6 ft. stage and into a bus. He managed to climb back up and showered Lily in beer. And look what he posted later on his MySpace page. "I had to pop to hospital for my neck and ankle. She just had too much carnival spirit> Which is a nice way of saying she was once again annoying as hell. Any money on which state of the world she won't be allowed into next?