Win Wii in... WinWii Contest

WiiWasHere wants to see them Achievement Coins. Got any?

If you're looking for a good deal on a Wii for this holiday season... then by all means hit a bunch of retailers and see their offers. Now, if you're looking for more than a deal on a Wii, like let's say... a FREE Wii, then WiiWasHere is the place to be this time around, as they're giving away a Wii and copies of Super Smash Bros. Brawl! to whoever gathers the most Achievement Coins.

What you need to do is just sign up as a WiiWasHere member and challenge your friends. Then, as soon as the fight is over (given that you're going to fight and not play co-op) members rate each other's performance and earn Achievement Coins, which can then be used to prove skill level and win different WiiWasHere contests, like today's WinWii contest.

Since gamers can now instantly challenge friends online via a Wii Optimized Chat!, there's no reason why you shouldn't go for the big prize (a Nintendo Wii console and a copy of Super Smash Bros. Brawl), or the second prize (just the Super Smash Bros. Brawl game copy). Either way, as the official report informs, Achievement Coins are awarded upon completion of ratings.

Here's what you need to know about the Achievement Coins: You can award achievement coins once a challenge is over. Rate your fellow challenge participants according to who you favor most. Once all participants have rated everyone, an average rank will be awarded to each player as well as achievement coins. Collect as many achievement coins as possible for bragging rights, and who knows, you might be awarded cool prizes at the end of the month. WiiWasHere is your one stop Wi-Fi phone book, as well as, an elaborate and friendly community. It goes easy on your eyes, and best of all, it is Wii friendly.

Click here to sign up for the contest, and/or learn more about it. Have fun and good luck!
