

13 October 2006

By: Elena Gorgan, Entertainment News Editor

You Know That's How You'd Wanna See Scarlett!

Domestic Scarlett does 'Esquire'

The curvy actress has a very interesting way of showing gratitude and we, the average mortal, can only be happy for it. Scarlett Johansson decided to thank the magazine that invested her with the ultimate power of 'the sexiest woman alive' by posing for a very special photo shoot. There are too few bad things one could say about Scarlett and I doubt that, whoever had the guts to utter them would live to tell the story. On the other hand, there is sooooo much to say about her hotness, and these photos here are just living proof for that. Many women don't usually look that hot in the kitchen and certainly not when their shaving their legs. Yes, I know that Scarlett wouldn't either, that this is just play pretend, but where's the harm in indulging in a little fantasy? Personally, I say that 'Esquire' chose the right woman for the part of 'the sexiest' on the planet and, via this, I congratulate them for thus 'domesticating' her. It shows her in a different light, as your regular girl next door and, at the same time, it takes something away from her femme fatale allure. And speaking of 'Allure', I heard that she also did a photo shoot for them too and that, reportedly, she is looking even hotter than here. Until those pics come out, I'll leave you with Scarlett rummaging the fridge. Who wouldn't want that 'view' in his own house?