Momento allows you to wirelessly stream photos directly from your PC, laptop or WiFi enabled digital camera

If you find printed photos a waste of paper (and wood of course), perhaps you might be interested in this. i-mate's Momento wireless digital photo frames combine the highest quality digital screen with wireless capability. The device comes in two flavors. Momento 100 features a 10-inch screen diagonal (equivalent to a traditional 5 x 8.5-inch picture frame), while the Momento 70 holds a 7 inch screen diagonal (equivalent to a traditional 3.6 x 6 inch picture frame) sizes. Using one of these, you can wirelessly stream photos directly from your PC, notebook or even WiFi enabled digital cameras. The USB port and multiple memory card slots (SD, MMC, XD, SmartMedia, Memory Stick) also let you play photos directly off this device when connected. You have lots of options to sort and display your pictures: by tags, folders, ratings, data taken and playlists. You can even create your own slide-shows, choose a landscape or the portrait orientation. Other features include a USB support, a remote control, WiFi 802.11 b/g, built-in storage for up to 200 pictures and audio file support (WMA, MP3). Both frames are Windows XP and Windows Vista compatible. In addition, i-mate offers a free trial subscription for the MomentoLive Internet picture sharing service. All Momento frames are Internet ready, so once connected via a wireless router and broadband service, you can use MomentoLive to receive photos instantly from anywhere in the world directly on your Momento frame. The Momento 70 and 100 are available from DSG International chain (PC World, Currys, Dixons.co.uk and Pixmania.com) and will retail for 99 and 199.99 UK pounds respectively.
